

Motivating students to achieve a high level of English

This report is intended to answer the question: “How to motivate students to reach a good level of spoken and written English?” Yes, it really is a problem, because many students after finishing their secondary school have no idea how to speak English. And it is really a big problem for example in apprentice training centres (in czech it is called “učiliště”), because people finishing their studies there do not know even the Czech grammar well so far from English grammar and speaking. This information is based on the report of my friend called Jakub.

But what can we do with this problem? Above all we should remember, that English is really important for those who are leaving school in this time. They need to communicate with their business partners, read instructions to some machine etc. This idea must be clearly known among students.

The solution is about money and good teachers. There is a need of money to train teachers to do their best. Students need many different activities in English and high-quality students-books and workbooks with English CDs. But The high-quality equipment is always expensive and so it is with English materials. So there could be donations for those who have not enough money to buy it.
